Ask the PEMA Director

September is National Preparedness Month. Snow.  Floods.  Extreme Heat.  With every season, there is always something to prepare for. National Preparedness Month is an opportunity to remind us that we all must prepare ourselves and our families now and throughout the year. Learn more about preparedness from the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency (PEMA) Director Randy Padfield.

Why is preparedness important to you?

I want to make sure my family is well taken care of, especially in times of emergencies or disasters. It is important to make sure we are prepared for any situation and that our safety and security is taken care of.

What are important things to consider when getting prepared?

Depending on where you live and what you do daily, preparedness is not foremost on every person's mind. A lot of times we think about it when we see disasters occur in other parts of our nation or the world. Preparedness is sometimes just a mindset. You have to think about the things you would need and essentially be able to survive and sustain yourself and your family for up to 72 hours, especially after any significant event.

People tend to think preparing is overwhelming. It does not have to be. Think about what you have in your home today. Think about the nonperishable food that you may or may not have in your home because having nonperishable food is very important. Think about the situations you may have encountered in the past, but also think of other situations you may encounter in the future.

Use that as a guide for things you wish you would have had during those times of an extended power outage or times you could not go out on the road because of a snow storm. Make sure you have flashlights, extra batteries, and drinkable water.

Do you have a plan? Make a plan. Share your plan with your family members. Make sure your family members understand the plan. If you are displaced from your home or something does happen, make sure you have a family member or a place that you can go.

Are you Ready PA?

Most Pennsylvanians think we will experience a natural disaster within the next five years.

- 1 in 3 people have an emergency plan in place to respond to a natural disaster.
- 2 in 3 people have an emergency kit in their home.
- 1 in 3 people have an emergency kit in their vehicle.
- 1 in 3 people have an emergency kit in their workplace.

Ask the PEMA Director

Why should Pennsylvanians prepare?

Pennsylvanians should prepare because I am sure everyone wants to keep their family safe, especially during disasters or emergencies. There are a number of human-caused and natural disasters that can occur across Pennsylvania. We have extended power outages, snow storms, excessive rain, and flash flooding and they all impact people in different ways. Being prepared for those types of situations are important. People sometimes think preparing is overwhelming. Really it's the little things that you do on a regular basis make the biggest difference when it comes to your own personal preparedness.

How do you help your children learn about preparedness?

I help my children learn how to be prepared in a number of different ways. I try to use real-life examples as opportunities to talk to them about preparedness. If they see emergencies or disasters on tv or hear about them elsewhere, you can talk about that. Ask them what they would do if that occurred here? I also use every day things that we do such as going on road trips or going on vacation. Have them pack their own bags and then talk to them about why they packed certain things. What do we need to have to go on the road trip? Snacks and those types of things. What happens if someone gets injured? Do we have a first aid kit? Because my family likes to camp, it gives us the opportunity to talk about preparedness. If we are going out in the woods for three days, we talk about what we would need to bring with us to sustain ourselves for those three days. Sometimes the smallest things you can do will help your children be better prepared, help them plan ahead, and help them understand how preparedness impacts them in the long-term.

9/11 National Day of Service and Remembrance

In 2009, legislation was passed that officially recognized September 11th as a National Day of Service and Remembrance. Recognizing the anniversary of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks is a way to pay tribute to, and remember the victims and others we wish to honor.

#MOMENTOF SILENCE

On 9/11, pay your respects by going silent on social media. During the times listed below, simply post these hashtags: #MomentofSilence and #911Day. Then, stay silent for just 1 minute.

We put aside whatever differences we may have at the moment, and work together to help others in need. That is the annual ritual, a fitting and appropriate gift to the many that lost their lives and the countless others who were injured or came to the aid or defense of those in need.

The 9/11 National Day of Service and Remembrance has grown to become the largest annual day of charitable service in the United States. To locate volunteer opportunities in your community or to register your September 11th National Day of Service and Remembrance, visit:

Impact Based Warnings—What Are They?

Warnings from the National Weather Service have undergone a makeover in recent years. Studies and test products led to a change in how information is presented, so people can make decisions based on their risk for injury or property damage. If a warning is issued for your area, you are at risk. The new warning formats place the hazards and risk in an easier to identify format. This format is currently used for severe weather and tornado warnings and will expand to flash flood warnings by the end of 2019.

HAZARD: Look here first. Tornado, hail, flash flooding, etc. The severity may also be listed to initiate rapid action. You may see phrases like "Life-threatening flash flooding" or "A deadly tornado."

SOURCE: This tells you from where the information originates. Are meteorologists seeing signs on radar, did a police officer or emergency manager spot it? This space can further justify a need for you to take immediate action.

IMPACT: Details the potential things that can happen within the warned area. Downed trees, home damage, flooding, etc. These should allow you to visualize what to expect from the hazard.

The remaining portions of the warning will aid you in decision making, especially if you are unfamiliar with the hazard. Read the Precautionary/Preparedness Actions section for safe action recommendations. If you do not receive severe warning alerts via text or email, you can sign up today through Alert PA.
